Annual Outing For Playground Children Aug. 11

The annual outing for the Newmarket Municipal playground will be held at Pine Island park, Manchester, on Wednesday, August 11. This is a "three-cent" day when rides on most of the amusements are three cents and the management caters to children who take advantage of the bargain offer in great numbers.

The trip will be partly financed by a tag day such as was held so successfully last year. It is scheduled for Friday, July 30th, when playground children will visit homes and approach people on the street with their covered boxes and tags.

Plans for the outing and for the tag day which will make it possible were completed at the meeting of the Civics department last Thursday evening at the lawn supper held at the home of Mrs. Ann Coolidge. A lobster salad supper was enjoyed on the lawn and the business meeting presided over by Mrs. Selma Shaw followed. Seventeen members were present.

The tag day will be in charge of Mrs. Doris Holt assisted by Mrs. Gertrude Jolie, Miss Ellen Dean, Mrs. Lelia Marelli, Mrs. Betty Philbrick. The committee plans to take three busses this year for the busses were overcrowded last summer.

Voters May Demand Crossing Overpass PSC Director Says

The latest article which appeared last Sunday in the New Hampshire Sunday News has particular interest to Newmarket residents who have been deeply concerned over the Exeter street railroad crossing for several years. Two accidents in which persons have been injured seriously enough to be sent to the hospital have occurred at the local crossing this summer.

"Almost 1000 railroad grade crossings, where two people have lost their lives in the last two weeks and which annually cause an average of eight fatalities, can be abolished by New Hampshire voters, the Public Service Commission revealed today.

Under State law a town may, by vote, require the proprietors of a railroad to build an overpass or an underpass at any of its railroad crossings, Winslow E. Melvin, PSC Transportation Director said.

To determine the priority with which such overpasses and underpasses should be constructed if towns petition, the Commission is today making a survey of all railroad crossings in the State. The survey was started one day before the fatal crossing accident in Pike, where eight-months pregnant Mrs. Barbara Mouncey lost her life last Thursday.

Latest PSC statistics show 1178 railroad crossings in the State, 90 per cent of them on the Boston (Continued on page 4)

Fresh Air Guests To Arrive Friday

Ten children from New York City sent by the New York Fresh Air fund will arrive in Durham Friday night on the 6:18 train from Boston to spend two weeks in homes in this area. The children have been invited to be guests of folks from Durham, Lee, Madbury and Newmarket.

A general committee of residents from these towns was organized by John C. Tonkin for the Durham Civic club. This committee has advertised and followed up the general invitation with a large number of calls to interested persons in the project. Invitations have already been received to entertain four more children in August. Persons interested in taking children for the later date should contact the committee very soon.

The following people are having children this week:

Mrs. Russell Eggert of Durham, one girl.

Mrs. Helen Savlnier of Lee, two children.

Mrs. Joy Judd of Madbury, one boy.

Mrs. Merrill Huntley of Madbury, one boy.

Mrs. Gilman C. Menter of Lee, one girl.

Mrs. Thomas Marshall of Lee, two boys.

Mrs. Robert Shaw of Newmarket, one girl.

Mrs. William Rudd of Durham, one girl.

Frank Piascik Takes Large Bass from Water

Frank Piascik of 33 Nichols avenue took a 33 pound striped bass at the General Sullivan bridge Tuesday afternoon about 4 o'clock when he was fishing there with his wife. The attendant at the bridge claimed that it is the largest fish taken from the water here in many years. The Piasciks brought home a second bass weighing about 15 pounds the same day.

They are entertaining relatives, Mr. and Mrs. B. Kojanski and Mrs. Mary Piascik of Hamden, Conn., this week-end and will serve a bass dinner. The rest of the fish will probably go to relatives and friends.

Car Broken Into On Vacation Trip

Mrs. Mattie Durgin and Mrs. Kathryn Rodrigues had an unfortunate experience in Newport, R. I. last week when they took a trip along the coast visiting Providence, Newport and Plymouth. They parked their car on a side street in Newport and were gone about an hour and a half for lunch.

When they returned they discovered the car had been broken into and the contents of one suit case dumped out and the lock on the other case broken. Nothing was taken, not even the lollipops and candy bought to bring home which led police to believe it was the work of adults who sought money.

Considerable Interest In Town, School Meetings

Kite Flying Is Picnic Feature Next Thursday

An outing featuring a picnic lunch and a kite flying contest will be the special event at the Newmarket Municipal playground next Thursday. The children will bring their lunch and hike together to a field on Packers' Falls road late Thursday morning.

The kite flying contest will feature the afternoon program. The kites are being made ahead under the direction of Ted Barton, playground instructor.

A circus parade featured the week last Thursday when about 125 children entered the competition. There were many clever costumes and cages rigged up on carts which made the work of the judges, Mrs. Gertrude Jolie, Mrs. Louise Barton and Mrs. Betty Philbrick, difficult.

There were 58 girls, side show characters, clowns, baloback riders, cages containing fierce "teddy bears," a real live goat, an occasional dog and a lone kitten among the entries. Prizes of movie tickets, ice cream sodas, lollipops and toys were awarded in the various classes.

Following the parade two contests were enjoyed, a peanut pushing contest in which Raymond Girouard and George Chapman pushed peanuts along the cinder pushed further with their noses than the other children and a bubble gum chewing contest in which Norman Talbot blew the largest bubble in a group of 25 children.

Winners in the parade were: Best cage, Ralph and Bobby Jolie, whose cage contained two teddy bears, and Connie Pelletier whose cage contained a rabbit; best gyp (Continued on page 10)

Chapman Family Reunion Sunday

Mrs. Grace Chapman Edward of 7 Main street attended the Chapman family reunion Sunday at Stratham Hill park where 148 members of this family from Newmarket, Exeter, Stratham, Portsmouth and Concord, N. H., Westfield, N. Y., Providence, R. I., and various places in Massachusetts gathered to honor the memory of John C. Chapman.

John C. Chapman invented the famous Chapman valve which is used today throughout the United States and many foreign countries.

He lived with his brother, William Chapman, at the family homestead on North Main street, Newmarket, after retiring from business in Boston and is buried in the Riverside cemetery where one of the famous valves which bears his name has been inserted in his tombstone behind plate glass.

Two Rivers Farm Auction Attracts Large Numbers

The auction of a herd of 53 head of registered Holsteins and all the farm equipment at Two Rivers farm on the Bay, a farm known to the oldtimers as the Old Stevens place, attracted nearly three hundred persons from this state, Vermont, Connecticut and Massachusetts on Monday. The herd of cattle sold for about $17,000, it was estimated, and prices on the farm equipment ran normally.

The herd sire, a great bull known as Dean Pearl Dunloggin, was bought by a man from Amesbury. The herd was originally bought from the late Harold Bishop of Vermont, whose brother has followed their record with considerable interest. The brother was present and bought four cows to take back to their original home. A registered calf was bought by a farmer for his young son who will raise it for a 4-H project, but no one learned the name of the child.

The farm is for sale and the manager, E. L. Slipp, and his wife and daughter, will live there until it is sold. The place was owned by Hills, Oglesby, Devine Wool merchants of Boston and the cattle was registered in Lawrence P. Hills' name.

T. R. Langdell of Milford and Wilton was auctioneer and the sale was held in a tent.

Card of Thanks

Mrs. Arthur Mongeon wishes to thank her many friends for the lovely gifts, flowers and cards she received during her illness in the Wentworth hospital in Dover.

Despite the hot weather lassitude which doesn't normally raise interest beyond fishing, swimming and cool breezes, the voters of Newmarket are showing considerable interest in the special town and school district meetings scheduled for next Monday and Tuesday. These meetings were authorized by the N. H. Superior court which ruled a state of emergency existing in Newmarket when the Tax Commission could not approve the submitted tax rate. The commission ruled that monies raised in March were not raised in accordance with the municipal budget system under which this town operates.

Philip Labranch, chairman, presided at a public budget meeting called Monday night at the Town Hall when the proposed budgets were read and the various items open for discussion. This meeting was attended by a mere handful of people and no item was challenged.

The article calling for money to remodel the fire damaged primary school into a fire house at a cost of $24,000, with $2,000 to be raised this year by direct taxation and $22,000, by a bond issue to be paid at the rate of $2,000 per year until paid is included in the new town warrant. The voters accepted this article by a large majority at the March meeting and the firemen are urging voters to support them again.

The Town meeting is scheduled for 3 o'clock in the afternoon, an hour which is distributing to a large number of voters who are working at the time of the day. Special arrangements are being made in many instances to take time from work for the meeting. The school district meeting is scheduled for 8 o'clock the following evening.

The articles dealing with appropriations are the articles in the two warrants which must come before the voters again and each of these articles carry the notation of approval or disapproval of the budget committee. One article on the school warrant and one article on the town warrant bear the notation "Not recommended by the budget committee." These relate to setting aside the sum of $6,076.50 from the fire fund for a capital reserve fund for a new gymnasium at the high school and tarring a section of road from George Sewal farm to Four corners.

The only addition to the budget submitted a few months ago is in the school budget where an additional $1,800 is asked to purchase a stoker for the high school. It is estimated that the new budget which is cut back somewhat will set the tax rate at about $46, instead of the $49, per thousand first figured.

HOME TOWN REPORTER

Farm Co-op Plank Is Open To Various Interpretations

IT APPEARS to this reporter that someone is due for a royal double-crossing on the farm cooperative plank in the Republican platform adopted at the convention at Philadelphia.

The National Council of Farmer Cooperatives is pleased with the plank and its Washington letter, the "Washington Situation" of June 25, says "The statement on cooperatives was included over the most bitter opposition from the National Tax Equality association and the National Associated Businessmen, Inc. They appeared before at least three sub-committees during the week in a vain attempt to get a 'tax equality' plank."

On the other hand, the NTEA and the NAB, who are the bitter foes of the NCFC, issued a release at Philadelphia immediately after the platform was adopted in which they claim a decisive victory over the farm co-ops.

The release on the letterhead of NAB declares: "The present tax exemption of cooperatives and other tax exempt businesses failed to win support in the proposed Republican platform of 1948. This defeat for the co-ops was revealed today in the text of the party's proposed platform setting forth principles on which the Republican party will appeal to the nation for votes at the next November general election . . . the co-ops had advocated that the Republicans declare in specific language for the present tax-exempt privileges." Now who is right on this issue?

The GOP platform plank on cooperatives contained just 13 words — "support of the principles of bona-fide farmer-owned and farmer-operated cooperatives." That's all it says. And the farm cooperatives say they are satisfied with that plank.

But the plank on small business, "the bulwark of American enterprise" calls, among other things, for "correction of tax abuses." And it is upon this language that the NTEA and the NAB claim victory.

Insofar as this reporter is concerned, our opinion is that the farm cooperatives are whistling in the dark if they are satisfied with the farm cooperative plank. As a matter of fact, the farm cooperative plank in this 1948 platform is IDENTICAL with the 1944 GOP convention platform which read "support of the principles of bona-fide farmer-owned and farmer-operated cooperatives." And further, the 1944 plank on small business provided "it must be aided by changes in taxation . . . and enforcement of laws against monopoly and unfair competition."

And the 1944 plank did not prevent the Republican 80th congress from attempting to eliminate the tax-exempt features of farm cooperatives and neither did it bring about further enforcement of laws against monopoly or "unfair competition" for small business.

If the co-ops will remember, Rep. Walter Ploeser (Rep., Mo.) conducted hearings all over the country with the express purpose of ending the tax exemption of co-ops declaring they were socialistic or communistic.

And it was only the herculean efforts of some of the friends of agriculture in congress that headed off a new tax bill when Rep. Harold Knutson (Rep., Minn.), chairman of the house ways and means committee, started to hold hearings for this purpose, namely ending of co-op tax exemption.

The one thing upon which co-op leaders are pinning their hopes is that both Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, GOP presidential nominee, and Gov. Earl Warren of California, vice presidential nominee, are on record as favoring retention of the tax-exempt feature. So, also, is President Harry Truman.

Over 800 Bills

Bills passed by the 80th congress likely will total more than 800 and in addition about 390 private bills were passed. Out of 61 vetoes by President Truman, six were overriden. But on the major issues the 80th congress fell by the wayside on such important bills as agriculture, housing, oleomargarine, national health, federal aid to education, a national road program, universal military training and many others.

A total of 11,832 bills and resolutions were introduced in this congress. 10,593 were public and private bills and resolutions and 1,239 were resolutions without force of law. During the 80th congress a little over 8,000 bills were introduced. 733 public bills and 892 private bills were passed. President Truman vetoed 76 bills and since it was a Democratic congress all vetoes stood up. Advent of the Republican 80th congress shackled Mr. Truman's legislative program to a large extent.

To use a favorite expression of Sen. Claude Pepper of Florida, the long range farm program adopted by the 80th congress is a "delusion and a snare." The senate passed a pretty fair bill. The house balked and passed a stand-by bill which merely extended present price supports to January, 1950. Then the conference committee took the senate bill and the house bill, made present price supports applicable until Dec. 31, 1949, and the senate bill is presumed to go into effect then.

HINTS FOR A HAPPY HOME

Life's Problems Are Endless

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

RAINBOW CHASERS

The subject of Miss Norris' discussion is rainbow chasers—people who claim they would be perfectly happy if. That small, two-letter word is dynamite—laden with connotations.

Like a weary hiker who has surmounted a steep bill only to be confronted by a series of more difficult inclines, these people are anticipating the day when their last obstacle will be behind them. They are certain that the day will arrive sometime despite the admonitions and warnings of wiser people who have preceded them.

Norma, who is typical of the multitudes who are blindly searching for the unattainable rainbow, writes Miss Norris that she would be supremely happy if her common-law husband would marry her. She has money, social position, children, a beautiful home and limitless luxuries but feels that she is still lacking something.

If Fred would legally marry her, Norma thinks she would be assured of security since Fred would not be as apt to discard her for another woman. Not only that but deep down in his heart Fred would respect and cherish her more.

The situation is a difficult one but Norma can be assured that once her present problem is solved others will spring up to take its place for the problems of life are endless.

... Fred's aristocratic mother ...

bles, keep a nice house, entertain, keep out of debt and occasionally go dancing with Jack as they used to do. Small wonder that for some of today's women the problem is too tough and they are going in for psychopathic reactions at a rate that would put in the shade the vapours, faints, nerves and weeping fits of their Victorian forebears!

Norma Wilcox has only one gnawing, burning problem, but she would swap it sight unseen for 20 of the usual kind. She is 36, a woman to whom years have brought an increasing beauty and charm. Her husband is popular and attractive as she is, in his own way, and the three children are beauties—a girl of 13 and boys of 11 and 4. The Wilcoxes recently have bought a beautiful place on Long Island and Fred is progressing steadily toward fame and fortune. The nicest neighboring families have taken up the Wilcoxes with great enthusiasm, so what is the trouble?

The trouble is that Norma and Fred never were married. Fred had a living wife when he and Norma first fell in love. They were 15 years younger then, penniless and adventurous, and they took the law into their own hands. Now Fred's wife is dead, but he won't consent to a marriage ceremony. He says, which is true, that his name would make the thing news and he will not have his children marked by illegitimacy. His advice is "Forget it."

No one knows this except myself, Norma, Fred and Fred's aristocratic mother, who never has liked Norma. She intends to leave her fortune to the daughter of Fred's first marriage. Norma, therefore, knows that when the older woman dies, the story must come out. She knows that fascinating women are paying court to Fred in his new successes. She knows that should they separate, her three children would be hers alone, but she doesn't want that. She doesn't want the children to live apart with her somewhere, on an allowance that would be merely charity on Fred's part.

She's not really afraid of Fred's leaving her. She knows that even if the affair was a nine-day wonder, it wouldn't hold the public interest forever. But she's uncomfortable.

When she told me the story two years ago she said she couldn't resign herself to accept the situation. Her mother-in-law naturally has no respect for her, she said. She doesn't think Fred has, deep in his heart. When she says to him that there are quiet places where he and she could be married without publicity, he brushes the whole matter off unconcernedly. She has her furs, home, opera box, children and everything else she wants, hasn't she? For the rest, "forget it."

"When I get tired of you, I'll let you know," Fred tells her.

"Every time I fancy I'm less pretty or popular," writes Norma, "or Fred spends more than three minutes talking to some new woman, I get nervous and can't sleep. And nobody knows and nobody sympathizes and everyone thinks I'm the luckiest woman in the world. Is there any easy way out of a mess like this?"

What I wrote her is between Norma and me. It was a way out. But not an easy one. There is no easy way out.

Women Excel in Murder

CHICAGO.—Take it from the Illinois Police association, women get away with murder.

In its official journal, the association said women are harder to prosecute for slaying than men.

"Occasionally, a woman goes to jail for a killing," the article said, "but not too often. The electric chair seems destined to be used only by male customers. Illinois juries don't favor it for women."

"I've told you it makes no difference to me, Ralph, and I meant it. It really doesn't."

Dusk dimmed the coral gold of Harriet Marne's hair, dimmed the blue of the light dotted buildings rising above the flat roofs upon which she and Ralph Pell stood. It filled with deep shadow the narrow slot of the alley between them, and the noise of the city was a screen about them, isolating them from the rest of the world.

"That's what you think now, but you'd get straight in your thinking in a few weeks, or months, or years. Then it would make a lot of difference." Across the alley, Ralph Pell leaned bronzed arms on the low brick parapet of the other building and shook his head in slow deliberation. Pink neon glow spilling into the alley from the street eight floors down glistened on his brown eyes and made odd shadows in his curly brown hair. It changed to an impossible color the tan of his knitted sport shirt. "After that, it would always be there between us. Or rather, it wouldn't be there."

He laughed harshly and reached down to feel, through brown trouser fabric, the device which substituted for the flesh and bone he had left on a field in Normandy when gunfire from the ground met parachutes drifting silently in the darkness. He would never forget that.

"No, Ralph." Harriet's small fist struck the stained brick of the low parapet bordering her own flat roof, as if to drive understanding across the dark drop of the alley between them. "It would never make any difference to me. To me, you would always be—" She groped momentarily for a word that would not sting.

"Normal?" His voice was flat and bitter.

"Please, Ralph." Her voice rose a little.

"Sorry, but I'd never be that, even with two real legs." He laughed shortly. "Service medico says I'm part of a mind, as well as part of a man. Let's don't kid ourselves. Too much is riding on it. It would always be there between us like—well, like this alley is between us now. I'd have as much chance getting over it as I would getting over this alley." He glanced down at the eight-story drop, the sliver of pavement below. "Imagine me doing that. Be your age. Get wise to some facts. The best thing for both of us to do is to forget we ever—Ah!" He made a savage gesture. "Let's talk about something else."

Harriet said that quickly, almost desperately.

"Let's talk about you peeping at me on my roof here this summer. Let's talk about you waiting downstairs to introduce yourself as the peeper. Let's talk about the places we have been together, the things we have done. Let's talk about our meeting up here with the alley between us in the evening. Let's talk about—" Her voice stopped for a moment on an odd, sharp gasp. "Let's talk about the big ape escaping from the city zoo this afternoon. Let's—"

"It would never make any difference to me. To me, you would always be—" She groped momentarily for a word.

"Ape escaping from the zoo?" Ralph Pell stood, tall and slender in the night. "I haven't heard anything about it. You're sure?"

"You probably missed it." Harriet laughed a little shrilly. "The ape is big and black and ferocious. I—I certainly wouldn't like to meet him up here on my roof alone, with no one here to help me. Goodness! Ooooooooh!" She shivered audibly.

"No chance of that." There was amused tolerance in his grin. "The ape's probably back in his zoo cage and glad to get away from humans. And I didn't peep at you on your roof. I looked. It can't be a crime to look at softness and beauty and sweetness, with so much hardness and ugliness and bitterness in the world. It can't be a crime for a—Ah! Let's talk about the ape!" he finished quickly, harshly.

"Well, I like that." Harriet laughed.

She moved away from the parapet, small and shapely in the night against the neon sky. "I'm cold. I'll have to get a wrap. Don't go away. I'll be back in a minute." She ran.

Ralph Pell watched her cross the flat roof of the other building to the small shedlike structure that housed the stairway. It was about forty feet away. Then he jammed his hands down into his trouser pockets, swore softly and kicked at gravel on his own flat roof with his good foot, balancing himself on the artificial limb. His eyes were stormy, his lips tight.

Harriet was swell people. That made it tough, but positive. She deserved a whole man. Years, or maybe only months or weeks from now, she'd look back and be glad that things turned out as they had.

HARRIET'S small figure appeared in the doorway of the stairway shed on the other roof. Even as she appeared, a strange black shape came between them, all but blocking her from his view. Then he heard her scream, shrill and clear in the night.

"Ralph!"

The ape!

The impact of the two words drove him forward until his knees struck the edge of the low brick parapet bordering the eight-story drop into the alley between the two buildings.

Shouting for help would be useless. By the time someone heard and understood and reached the other roof. . . . It would take many minutes to run downstairs, cross to the other building and get to the roof. In the meantime. . . .

Sweat came out on his face as he put his good foot up on the edge of the brick parapet and thrust his lean weight up with the other leg. Grunting with effort, he flung himself out over the alley and toward the brick parapet of the other building roof.

For a moment, he was drifting down through the black Normandy night, a huge silk dome above him, bracing himself for the blast from the ground, the numbing shock of bullets striking.

His artificial foot struck the other parapet and slipped off. He fell. There was a quick, breath-taking drop toward the pavement eight floors down, then his outflung arm struck brick. Brown fingers curled over a sharp edge, gripping. Strain came on the arm as he stopped the fall, and his weight all but tore his fingers loose. Small, sharp sounds came from his lips and he got his good leg up, hooked the heel over the edge of the parapet, then levered the rest of him up. He rolled over the parapet top and dropped to the flat gravel roof of the other building, and his heart beat was shaking him.

Even as he struck he was up and running toward Harriet and the black shape. He came within reach, laced fingers into stiff, coarse fur and jerked savagely to drag the black shape away from Harriet. The fur yielded with an ease that all but made him fall, and he found himself holding the black-furred pelt of a small animal. There was felt sewn to the underside of the pelt, and he recognized the thing.

"Hey! This is the little black bearskin from your apartment!" He yelled at Harriet Marne standing before him in the darkness, small and quiet. "Hey! You made me jump that—I might have—I!"

"I knew you wouldn't fall—couldn't fall." Harriet Marne started laughing and crying at the same time. "It was just one more jump you had to make—to prove—Oh, Ralph!" Her lifted arms were slim and white in the night.

Ralph Pell dropped the pelt, and there was no further need for words.

Thy Word

To draw upon for food, for strength and power

Of daily living, I have safely stored
Thy word, dear Lord, a precious golden hoard.

So radiantly it glows within my breast,
It is like firelight, like candleshine,
I share it with the hungry and oppressed,
I give it out, and still thy word is mine,
I should be as a beggar in my need
Had I not hid this food on which to feed.

Politics—the partisan variety—holds the spotlight at Concord this week as the formal filing period for candidates gets into full swing. Observers are predicting this will be the duller primary campaign in New Hampshire history. Styles Bridges is running for his third term in the Senate, and probably will have no serious opposition either in the Republican primary or the November run-off. The same is true for Sherman Adams, who seeks the GOP nomination for Governor, Norris Cotton and Chester E. Merrow, who will be after their respective seats in Congress again.

At the time this column is written, Congressman Merrow has not filed for reelection, but nobody has heard anything to indicate he won't run. He has until July 30 to file. The entire Congressional delegation will have to be back in Washington for the special session by next Monday, so their campaigns will be deferred until mid-August.

Sen. Doris M. Spollett of Hampstead, the Senate's only woman member, will seek reelection in District 23. Last time, she was nominated by both the Republicans and the Democrats, but she wears her legitimate GOP label in the 1948 primary. After skipping a term, ex-Sen. Erwin E. Cummings of Lyndeboro is back in the lists as a candidate in District 12. Handsome ex-Mayor C. Wesley Lyons of Rochester is running in District 20.

publican, is running in the 14th district.

Some other familiar political figures are in senate contests this year. Veteran Joseph B. Perley of Lebanon, who has sat in both branches of the General Court, is running for the GOP nomination in District 5. Sen. Paul B. Gay of New London is running in District 7. Rep. Harold O. Pierce of Walpole, another who has served in both the House and Senate before, is a candidate in District 10. Ex-Sen. Arthur J. Reinhart, studious Portsmouth politico, is running in District 24.

Who's Bridges

Styles Bridges is a name to conjure with in New Hampshire politics but too few people know the details of his career. Born in Maine, he will observe his 50th birthday just five days before the September primary. He was graduated from the University of Maine, and has honorary degrees from there, Dartmouth, UNH and Northeastern. His first job was on the agricultural extension service of the University of New Hampshire. Later he was secretary of the N. H. Farm Bureau Federation, director and secretary of the N. H. Investment company, secretary and treasurer of the Farm Bureau Mutual Automobile Ins. Co.

Bridges entered public life as member and chairman of the state Public Service commission in 1930, held that job until he was elected Governor in 1934. Two years later, despite the label "Little Boy Blue" pinned on him by his opponent, he defeated George H. Moses for the U. S. Senate nomination and won in November. He has remained there 12 years, rising to his present rank as chairman of the Appropriations committee when the Republicans won their present slim majority in the Senate 18 months ago.

In private affairs, Bridges is vice president of the N. H. Savings bank at Concord, director of the Rumford Press and Farm Bureau Ins. company, treasurer of the Putnam Agricultural Foundation. Married three times, he is the father of three sons. The oldest boy, who bears his father's name and a strong resemblance to him, was a lieutenant during the war. Politically no liberal, Bridges has the reputation of being a party "regular," supported Roosevelt foreign policy in the prewar years.

It seems doubtful that any pressure to its traditional balance of four Republicans this term.

Several state senators are seeking promotion to the Council this year. In District 2 (East Side) Councilor Paul W. Hobbs of North Hampton is not expected to run, and the nod may go to Sen. J. Guy Smart of Durham. In District 3 (Manchester) Sen. C. Edward Bourassa, exuberant young Democrat, is his party's probable choice, and the political dope is the district will return to the Democratic fold this year.

Sen. James W. Colburn of Nashua is one of three aspirants for the GOP nomination in the fourth (Southwest) Councilor district. Contesting the nomination with him are ex-Sen. Charles M. Mills of Jaffrey, who has been doing research for the U. S. Senate during the past year, and Joseph W. Brown of Nashua, leader in American Legion department affairs.

In District 5 (Central) Councilor Donald G. Matson has bowed out of the race and thrown his support to Sen. Charles F. Stafford, likeable Laconia Republican leader. Also running is ex-Sen. Herbert W. Swift of New London. Sen. John P. H. Chandler of Warner, who was going to run here, has withdrawn and will support Stafford.

May Get Brother Team

The state Senate may see its first brother team in history, if the Wiggin boys both come through in their contests. Atty. J. Walker Wiggin of Manchester, speaker of the 1947 House, is running for the Republican nomination in the 16th district, and his brother, Ralph, of Bedford, also a Re-

Meet Sherm Adams

With the same political charm but not as much luck as Bridges, Sherman Adams of Lincoln was an important industrialist before he entered public life. Born in Vermont, he is now 49 years of age. He went to Dartmouth, interrupted his college career to serve with distinction in the Marine Corps during World War I, and returned to get his degree in 1920. He was an executive of Parker-Young company at Lincoln for 24 years.

Adams went to the Legislature from his home town in 1941, his first excursion into public affairs, and won prominence for his work as chairman of the Labor committee. Reelected from Lincoln in 1943, he was speaker of the House that term. He was elected to Congress in 1944, didn't like Washington, came back to run for Governor in 1946 and lost the GOP nomination to Charlie Dale by 170 votes.

Sherm's private activities include being director of Pemigewasset National Bank, former president of the White Mountain Region, member of the New England Council and senior member of the Society of American Foresters. Quite a joiner, he belongs to the Masons, Elks, Grange, Shrine, American Legion and 40-and-8. He and Mrs. Adams have a son and three daughters.

About New Hampshire

The small fieldstone chapel of St. James piscopal church at Burkhav, on the shore of Lake Sunapee, will mark its 50 anniversary on Saturday. The church stands today as a monument to the faith and generosity of boy campers who collected the funds for ten years to build the church, and to those who donated the land and labor to erect it. Used only in the summer, the chapel has seen 1,124 worship services conducted by 39 different pastors and four bishops.

221 are overpasses or underpasses, or less than 20 per cent.

Of the 957 railroad crossings at grade, Melvin said, 674 are unprotected by automatic signals, gatemen or flagmen, and approximately 20 so-called "private grades" have no protection whatever.

These statistics were compiled before the Federal Grade Crossing elimination program was established, Melvin said, and some progress has been made since then. The Pike crossing, however, was one of those which lacked automatic signals of any sort eight years ago when there was a fatality, which lacked automatic signals last Thursday, and which lacks them today.

Fine for Neglect

The law, under which New Hampshire towns have the power to force railroads to install overpasses, underpasses, to erect and maintain gates, or to station flagmen at any highway, provides for a fine of $100 a month for every month of non-compliance. Within 60 days after receiving a copy of the vote, however, the railroad may petition the PSC for an examination of the crossing, and the commission may rule as it sees fit.

PSC statistics, now being revised by Melvin and his assistant, William F. Hancock, show the following crossing information: Boston & Maine — 1070 crossings, 113 overpass, 98 underpass, 859 grade crossings, 604 of which are unprotected by automatic signals or personnel, 242 of which are protected, and 13 of which are "private"; Canadian National Grand Trunk: 39 crossings, 2 overpass, 18 of which are automatically or personally unprotected and 16 protected; Maine Central — 69 crossings, 1 overpass, 4 underpass, 64 grade crossings, 52 unprotected by automatic devices, 11 protected and one private.

Polish Club - Newfields

The Polish Club shut out the Newfields Town Team 7 to 0 in the final game of the first half of the twi-league season. The Polishers are first half champions and the loss dropped Newfields into a tie for the cellar with the Legion.

Frank Homiak hurled all the way for the Club and allowed but three hits. Williams got off to a bad start for Newfields as the club bunched all of their five hits and seven Newfields errors for seven runs in the first two innings. But thereafter hurled hitless and runless ball over the final four frames.

Ed Finn was the batting star with two hits in two trips and two runs batted in.

Rams - Legion

The Newmarket Rams won easily over the American Legion 7 to 2 in a twi-league contest to end up in second place for the first half.

Norm St. Pierre, ace Rams slabster, had the situation well in hand at all times except the 6th when a hit and two errors gave the Legion their only two runs.

Bunny McKenna started on the mound for the Legion but was too wild to be effective, giving up eight walks. Webb relieved in the sixth.

Sylvia Fitts Weds L. F. Getchell

DURHAM—The Durham Community church was the scene Saturday of the wedding of Miss Sylvia Fitts, daughter of Agriculture Commissioner and Mrs. Perley I. Fitts of Durham, and Leonard Forbes Getchell, son of Prof. and Mrs. Edward L. Getchell, also of Durham. The bride was given in marriage by her father and was attended by her sister, Mrs. Warren C. Baldwin of Detroit, Mich., and Miss Mary Edith Barracough of Durham and Mrs. Keith C. Bird-sall of Greenland, as bridesmaids.

Rev. Arnold A. Brown, pastor of the church, officiated at the double ring ceremony. E. Bevan Getchell, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. David Page of Durham and Richard M. Fitts, brother of the bride, were ushers. Prof. Irving D. Bartley was at the organ.

A reception in the Community house followed the ceremony.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Getchell are graduates of Dover High School and the University of New Hampshire, where they are members of Phi Mu Delta and Kappa Delta respectively. Mr. Getchell served two and a half years in Europe during the war. He is now studying dentistry at New York university. ## We're Growing With New England

That means we're growing fast... to keep pace with New England's telephone needs.

For today, more people have telephones than ever before, and they are making more calls. To keep up with these increases is taking by far the biggest construction program in our history.

A construction program requires money, men and materials. In 1946 and 1947, for example, our expenditures for new construction amounted to approximately $119,000,000.

Present plans call for continued heavy expenditures. There are still people without telephones; and, until all their needs are filled, we cannot provide the changes in type of service that many people now want.

Our program is evidence of our confidence in the continuing development of this and other New England communities, and part of our never-ending effort to make telephone service available to everyone who wants it, when and where he wants it.

Over and above this we try to keep in mind the little things — the extra touches of thoughtfulness, courtesy and helpfulness that make good telephone service even better.

Here in Newmarket there are now about 610 telephones and about 2400 telephone calls being made daily. As telephone usage develops, we shall keep in step with it, making changes and additions that may be required, and we shall endeavor to provide men and materials necessary to meet your increasing telephone needs.

PRESIDENT TRUMAN DIDN'T PACK 'EM IN HERE . . . Here of late the great speech-listening American public has been staying away in droves from certain of President Truman's official appearances. This phenomenon has been attributed variously to (a) insufficient publicity, (b) the heat, (c) the witing of Mr. Truman's popularity. For instance, only about one-third of the 14,000 seats set up for the occasion were occupied by an audience which paid $1 apiece for the privilege of listening to President Truman and other dignitaries expound on the centennial of the laying of the Washington monument cornerstone. This view was taken from the top of the 555-foot obelisk.

CONEY ISLAND AND THE MADDING CROWD . . . Ever been to Coney Island on a hot Sunday afternoon? It's a fabulous place where a stupendous assortment of metropolitan humanity throngs in an apparent effort to outnumber the grains of sand on the beach and in so doing spills over into the tumbling ocean surf. It is the place where the "great unwashed" goes to puddle its feet in the Atlantic. It's a sprawling, tangled monument to hot dogs, picnics and idle sun worship. It is a mecca of blistered noses and shoulders, beach umbrellas and portable radios. It is the place where lost children cry for their mothers. And above all, Coney Island constitutes a rejection by the people of the steaming, crowded life in the city and a pilgrimage to the beach where life is equally steaming and crowded.

NOW HERE'S SOMETHING A LITTLE DIFFERENT . . . This is the Custer channel wing plane, invented by Willard R. Custer and being tested by the National Aircraft corporation of Hagerstown, Md. Believe it or not, the ship has flown several times. The plane, with its elliptical wings, is controlled entirely by the action of its engine. It has no ailerons, flaps or brakes and no wing area except the channels which have a diameter of six feet. Gross weight of the plane is approximately 1,000 pounds, and the total wing area, including the space between the channels, is 42 square feet. No, it isn't a helicopter; it's a plain plane with elliptical wings.

Maine Hunters' Bag

Maine hunters bagged 120,000 rabbits and more than 100,000 partridge in 1947. Actual returns from checking stations showed a deer take of 30,349. About 12,000 pheasants were bagged, while only 500 geese fell to hunters' guns in Maine last year. Figures were compiled from a sampling of 10,000 license holders, which proved even more accurate than anticipated, as the wildlife census questionnaire totaled 31,000 deer taken, as against the checking station deer take of 30,349.

European Nations Expect U.S. to Play Santa Claus

HUMAN NATURE is much the same wherever you find it. It is natural for the individual to think first of himself and those for whom he is directly responsible. We Americans may criticize the actions of the people of other countries in seeking to obtain from us that "something for nothing," which is American aid. We do not have to leave the confines of our own country to find the same thing.

I DO NOT KNOW Dr. Townsend, and have no reason for questioning his motives in promoting the pension plan that bears his name. I am sure he believes that plan has a sound economic foundation; that it is not merely passing a tin cup asking alms for the aged. I have talked with a considerable number of Townsend club members, located in several states, and, unlike Dr. Townsend, all they see in the Townsend plan is "something for nothing" for themselves as individuals.

THAT IS WHAT the mass of the people of western Europe—the peasants and workers—see in the Marshall plan; it is why the greater percentage of the Italians of small income voted the Christian Democrat ticket. It was the promise of benefactions from an Uncle Sam Santa Claus. It was not patriotism, or the mind, that dictated that vote, but an empty belly. It was the promise of "something for nothing"—more "something" than was promised by Moscow.

WHAT WAS TRUE in Italy was also true in England, though a bit less directly. The English worker has been sold the idea that socialistic nationalization of industry would mean for the individual worker less work, but more money, and America would—and is—paying the cost of nationalization.

MUCH OF THE same thing is true in all western Europe, with the possible exception of Belgium, Holland and little Luxemburg, where the people seem to be making an earnest effort to help themselves.

NOT ALL EUROPEANS, any more than all Americans, are seeking that "something for nothing" which they can buy with a vote. If they do not get all they want by voting America's way, they can vote again and invite the Russian bear to play Santa Claus.

IN ITALY the masses—workers and peasants—are demanding for the peasants; the break up of large land holdings into small farms to be given to those now operating on a rental basis; for the workers: less work but more, much more, pay in money that has a real purchasing power, and government financed homes, for both workers and peasants; free medical attendance in schools and other free services. Altogether the cost would run far into the billions in American money values.

IF THE MARSHALL plan can uphold the Italian government long enough by keeping Italian stomachs satisfactorily filled, until the local government can have an opportunity to meet the continually increasing demands, Italy will probably remain in the list of western European nations. If we cannot, or do not, do all that is expected and demanded, Italy can vote again.

WHAT IS TRUE in Italy is largely true in all other western European nations. Each individual thinks of himself. All want less work, more pay and good money. The governments may promise self-help, but they have but little with which to meet the demands of the masses. In the end it is the masses who have the final say. They do the voting.

IN THE MEANTIME the Russian bear awaits the day of that hoped-for next vote. We must hope that America can succeed in the undertaking upon which we have embarked, but when an attempt is made to satisfy the demand of "something for nothing" it means traveling an almost endless road. If Russia does not wait in vain, world civilization, as we have known it, is gone for centuries.

IF OUR HOME community was not producing something for which people outside of our community will pay, it would not be long before we would all be broke. When we get that outside dollar and spend it with outside people, we have reduced the number of dollars we have a chance at getting again. We help to break the community and ourselves. It is the dollar we can attract from the outside, and keep circulating in our community that helps all of us. That is what home-buying accomplishes.

The local Eagles, FOE No. 1934, will hold the 5th annual outing at Simpson's Grove, Dover Point Sunday, August 15. There will be bus service from the club and the outing will continue rain or shine.
